EDD launches new Web Site

SACRAMENTO – The state Employment Development Department (EDD) is proud to debut its new labor market information Web site. Visitors to the site will find new and useful features. The site has been redesigned and improved to offer users quicker and easier access to the latest labor market information. The new site can be found at www.labormarketinfo.edd.ca.gov.

The new site provides users with immediate access to a database of thousands of labor market statistics, timely articles, research publications, and other information including occupational, industry, and employment data, wage and salary information, and the latest emerging occupations. It also includes special features with links to local, state, and national statistics.

Customers will find easy access to information about a local area, occupation, or industry on one page. Visitors may select specific data and download it for customized reports, tables, and graphs.

Frequent visitors will appreciate the ability to create and customize their own page with information they use the most—all in one convenient location. From jobs of the future to how much they pay, job seekers and employers will find easy access to a wealth of information.

This new Web site was developed concurrently with 22 other state's labor market information programs. Working together greatly reduced the cost of each Web site and similar web site navigation makes it easier to use especially for multi-state employers, economic developers, and people looking to change careers or change location.

For a time, the new LaborMarketInfo Web site will work in tandem with our previous web site, www.calmis.ca.gov. An on-line crosswalk has been provided from the new site to the old site to ease the transition.
